At Shirley Junior School we believe that children should have the opportunity to develop high self esteem, with the ability to form secure relationships, and make informal decisions about moral and social issues.

Our teaching will aim to help our children cope with the physical and emotional challenges of growing up, giving them appropriate understanding of human reproduction. Relationships and sex education is a continuing, developmental process, which includes the exploration of attitudes and values and the development of skills, as well as the presentation of factual knowledge. As with all learning it is gradual and matched to the child’s maturity and stage of development.

It develops children’s awareness of, and respect for themselves and others by adding their development of positive self-esteem, which will help children to cope with the challenges of personal growth. It enables children to be aware of the personal choices they can make and prepares them to make responsible decisions. It allows them to explore feelings and emotions through a variety of different contexts and enjoy the confidence in their own ability.

As part of the sex and relationships education framework, pupils are taught about the nature and importance of family life and bringing up children. Pupils will learn about significance of loving and caring relationships, however, care is taken so that no child is stigmatized because of his/her home circumstances and staff should be aware of these before begin a lesson/circle time containing such nature. Pupils will also have the opportunity to learn and to understand different types of family including single parent family, foster care and adoption.

The objective of sex and relationship education is to help and support our pupils through their physical, emotional and moral development. This is firmly embedded in to our PSHE SoW, we will help our pupils learn to respect themselves and others and move with confidence from childhood through adolescence into adulthood.

What is Sex and Relationship Education?

Sex and Relationship Education is about the physical, moral and emotional development. It supports their understanding of the importance of family life, built on by respect and loving relationships.

Sex and Relationship Education has three main elements:

Attitudes and Values:

- Learning the importance of values and moral considerations
- Learning the value of family life, marriage and stable relationships
- Learning the value of love, respect and care

Personal and Social Skills:

- Learning to manage emotions and relationships confidently and sensitively.
- Developing empathy and self respect.
- Learning to make choices with prejudice
- Appreciating the consequences of choices made
- Managing conflict
- Recognizing and avoiding exploitation and abuse
- Developing skills for a healthier safer lifestyle
- Developing and using communication skills and assertiveness skills to cope with the influences of their peers and the media
- To respect and care for their bodies

Knowledge and understanding:

- Learning about and understanding physical development
- Understanding human sexuality, reproduction, sexual health, emotions and relationships.
- Learning about contraception and the range of local and national sexual health advice, contraception and support services.
- Learning the reasons for delaying sexual activity, and the benefits to be gained from such delay; and the avoidance of unplanned pregnancy.

We ensure the materials used in schools are in accordance with the PSHE framework and the law. Inappropriate images will never be used nor should explicit material not directly related to explanation. We ensure that our pupils are protected from teaching and materials which are inappropriate, having regard to the age and cultural background of the pupils concerned. Our Governors and head teacher would discuss with parents and take on board concerns raised, both on materials which are offered to schools and on sensitive material to be used in the classroom.

We also want to ensure that children are protected from accessing unsuitable materials on the Internet. We have followed the "Child Exploitation and Online Protection centre guidance which outlines how we allow our children to access the Internet safely and prevent our children from accessing unsuitable material.

Planning and Teaching

The Department recommends that all primary schools should have a sex and relationship education programme tailored to the age and the physical and emotional maturity of the children. It should ensure that both boys and girls know about puberty and how a baby is born – as set out in Key Stages 1 and 2 of the National Science Curriculum. All children, including those who develop earlier than the average, need to know about puberty before they experience the onset of physical changes. In the early primary school years, education about relationships needs to focus on friendship, bullying and the building of self-esteem.

Every child is entitled to receive SRE regardless of ethnicity, gender, religion, age, culture, disability, sexuality, language special needs, disadvantaged and looked after children.

It is our intention all children have the opportunity to experience a programme of SRE at a level which is appropriate for their age and physical development with differentiated provision if required.

Parents and pupils are reassured that the personal beliefs and attitudes of teachers will not influence the teaching of sex and relationship education within the PSHE framework. Our teachers and all those contributing to sex and relationship education are expected to work within an agreed values framework as described in the school's policy, which must be in line with current legislation.

Teachers may require support and training in answering questions that are better not dealt with in front of a whole class. We will always endeavour to support our teachers who may need support and training to deliver the programme sensitively and effectively.

The Curriculum

At KS2 sex and relationship education should contribute to the foundation of PSHE and Citizenship by ensuring that all children:

- develop confidence in talking, listening and thinking about feelings and relationships;
- are able to name parts of the body and describe how their bodies work;
- can protect themselves and ask for help and support; and
- are prepared for puberty.

Resources to teach sex and relationship education include SEAL, reference books such as Body Image in the Primary School by Nicky Hutchinson and Chris Calland and Christopher Winter Project 'Teaching SRE with Confidence in Primary Schools'; a computer based programme with lesson plans, games and resources for teaching to use as a guideline.

It is essential that we help our pupils develop in confidence in talking, listening and thinking about sex and relationships. We are aware teachers and other staff may need to overcome their own anxieties and embarrassment to do this effectively. Partnership between school and parents is the key to success. We aim to use a number of teaching strategies that can help this, including:

- Establishing ground rules with their pupils;
- Using 'distancing' techniques;
- Knowing how to deal with unexpected questions or comments from pupils;
- Using discussion and project learning methods and appropriate materials; and encouraging reflection.
- Ensuring that all body parts and sex related vocabulary are discussed using the scientific names by both adults and children.

As part of our Science Curriculum at Key Stage 2 we cover the following areas as part of our embedded PSHE curriculum:

- To recognise the main external parts of the bodies of humans
- To understand the functions of the main external body parts and to discuss the differences between male and female bodies (this will include the penis, testicles, vagina, ovaries, nipples, breasts, cervix and fallopian tubes).
- That humans and animals can produce offspring and these grow into adults.
- To recognise similarities and differences between themselves and others and treat others with sensitivity.

Shirley Junior School's sex and relationships curriculum will combine PSHE and Science objectives for each year group which will be progressive and age appropriate across the school. The basic focuses for each year groups are:

- Year 3 – Personal space and family differences.
- Year 4- The differences between genders and the stages of the human life from birth to old age.
- Year 5- Puberty, personal hygiene and body image (focusing on self-confidence)
- Year 6 – Sexual intercourse, conception, pregnancy and child birth. Responsibilities of family life and body image (focusing on the media).

Whenever, a PSHE session or circle time takes place we as a staff will always ensure a set of ground rules is discussed before each session. This will help create a safe environment in which they do not feel embarrassed or anxious about unintended or unexpected questions or comments from pupils. New ground rules might be developed as part of the sex and relationship education session or individually with each class or year group. For example, one class worked out this set of ground rules together:

- no one (teacher or pupil) will have to answer a personal question;
- no one will be forced to take part in a discussion;
- only the correct names for body parts will be used; and
- meanings of words will be explained in a sensible and factual way.

Dealing with questions

Teachers should establish clear parameters of what is appropriate and inappropriate in a whole class setting. Many teachers are concerned about responding to unexpected questions or comments from pupils in a whole-class situation. Having a set of ground rules should reduce the chances of this happening but teachers will need support and training so that they are prepared for the unexpected. For example:

- If a question is too personal, the teacher should remind the pupil of the ground rules. If the pupil needs further support, the teacher can refer her or him to the appropriate person, such as parent, school nurse, helpline, or an outside agency or service;
- If a teacher doesn't know the answer to a question, it is important to acknowledge this, and to suggest that the pupil or teacher or both together research the question later;
- If a question is too explicit, feels too old for a pupil, is inappropriate for the whole class, or raises concerns about sexual abuse, the teacher should acknowledge it and promise to attend to it later. In this way, the pupil will feel they have been treated with respect, but the rest of the class will not have to listen to personal experience or inappropriate information.
- To maintain trust and respect the teacher must remember to talk with the pupil later; and
- If a teacher is concerned that a pupil is at risk of sexual abuse, they should follow the school's child protection procedures.

Parents who withdraw their children

Parents have the right to withdraw their children from all or part of the sex and relationship education provided at school except for those parts included in the statutory National Curriculum (see section 3). We would make alternative arrangements in such cases.

Health professionals

Where appropriate we work closely with health professionals in the development and implementation of their sex and relationship education programmes. Our school nurse supports us by:

- helping us work in partnership with parents and make links between the school and other relevant professionals and services such as local GPs, family planning clinics, Genito-Urinary Medicine (GUM) clinics etc;
- telling pupils about the health services that are available in the area and help them develop the confidence and skills to make good use of them;
- giving pupils confidential support and advice, perhaps through services such as drop-in sessions; and they can provide specific and up-to-date knowledge about sexual health and well being and contraception.

Child Protection Issues

In addition to what is put in place in our school's sex and relationship education policy to inform and counsel our pupils, there will be rare occasions when a teacher is directly approached by a child who is sexually active or contemplating sexual activity. This will always raise child protection issues and sensitive handling will be needed to ensure that a proper balance is struck between the need to observe the law and the need for sensitive counselling and treatment including protection from disclosure to inappropriate adults. In such cases the teacher will inform and be advised by the school's Child Protection Liaison Officer/s (CPLOs).

We ensure we are absolutely clear about the boundaries of our legal and professional roles and responsibilities. A clear and explicit confidentiality policy is in place and ensures good practice throughout the school which both pupils and parents understand. Teachers cannot offer or guarantee absolute confidentiality.

We are very aware children cannot learn effectively if they are concerned or frightened about being abused or being the victims of violence in the home. They have a right to expect schools to provide a safe and secure environment. Any fears or worries they bring into the classroom should not go unnoticed by staff. Teachers are aware that effective sex and relationship education, which brings an understanding of what is and is not acceptable in a relationship, can lead to disclosure of a child protection issue.

- If a member of a school's staff (teaching or non-teaching) suspects that a child is a victim of abuse or they have reason to believe that he/she is at risk of abuse, they should be aware of the procedures for reporting their concerns and to whom they should do so. They should follow the procedures laid out in the Child Protection Policy.

Joint guidance by DfEE and the Department of Health published in 1999 – "Working Together to Safeguard Children" – sets out how all agencies and professionals should work together to promote children's welfare and protect them from abuse and neglect.

Sex and relationship education is monitored and evaluated by the Headteacher, SLT and PSHE Subject Manager as part of the school's development plan. As a result of this process changes will be made to the sex and relationship education programmes as appropriate.
